Research Quality

Research Quality

The Research Quality Team looks for global ways to improve clinical research efficiency and provide a high degree of customer service. They work with faculty and staff within the UCLA health system to determine and establish procedures, policies and quality standards and monitor these against key performance indicators. Research Quality is responsible for assessing barriers and obstacles in established workflows such as factors impacting study start-up activities and adoption of new technologies. For more information regarding the Research Quality Team, please reach out to ResearchQuality@mednet.ucla.edu.
